Feb. 26-March 1

Night at the Mercury Theatre

War of the Worlds

On Halloween in 1938, impresario Orson Welles produced a radio drama which catapulted him to fame. An adaptation of H. G. Wells' novel, the radio play was the first broadcast to demonstrate the power of the media. Crimson Masque takes you to the studio to see how the Mercury Theatre staged this world-changing event.

Feb. 26-28 at 7:30 pm; March 1 at 2 pm
Wells Theatre
directed by Janeve West

Night at the April 4-5

Our American Cousin

IN CELEBRATION OF LINCOLN'S BICENTENNIAL BIRTHDAY

This comedy concerns a rather bumptious Yankee, Asa Trenchard, who arrives in England, where he rescues his virtually impoverished English relatives from the treacherous financial machinations of a supposed family counselor and also marries the young girl whom he himself had inadvertently deprived of an inheritance. The play became one of the biggest comedy hits of its era.

April 4 at 7:30 pm; April 5 at 2 pm
Orpheum Theatre in Galesburg
directed by Bill Wallace
