Gold Rush Pompeii: The Archaeology of Gold Rush San Francisco's Waterfront

James Delgado
Senior Vice President
SEARCH, Inc

Since 1978, James Delgado has worked with the archaeological record of the Gold Rush port and the lost ships within it that now lie, thanks to landfill, twenty or more feet beneath the streets of San Francisco's Financial District. Sealed by mud in dark, airless conditions, the archaeological finds have included collapsed structures, ships' hulls, and exceptionally well-preserved artifacts that truly make this part of the city a "Gold Rush Pompeii."
