Course Description:

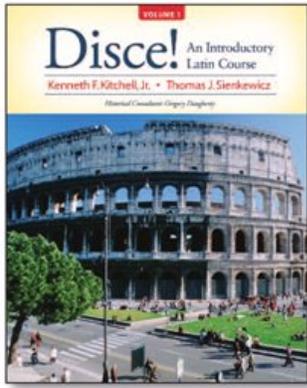

The aim of Latin 101 & 102 is for students to learn basic reading and writing skills in Latin as quickly and as thoroughly as possible. At the end of 2 terms of Elementary Latin, a student should know the fundamentals of Latin grammar, have a basic Latin vocabulary, and be able to read a Latin text with the help of a dictionary. Speaking and listening skills in Latin will be encouraged in order to assist the development of reading and writing Latin.

This course is primarily directed towards students desiring to meet the foreign language component of the general education requirements for graduation. Elementary Latin can also fulfill partial requirements for a major in Latin or Classics. Classes that meet the language requirement are described in the Monmouth College catalogue in the following way:

The creation and use of language is the most significant achievement of human beings, for our ability to organize our understanding in verbal symbols and to communicate sets us apart from all other life forms. The symbols of our language make communication possible at many different levels of meaning and allow us to translate our private experience into universal terms . . . A sure understanding of language is the foundation of all knowledge, and the ability to use verbal symbols effectively is the most important of all skills.

This component provides that every student have experience with a 2nd language. The study of a foreign language allows students to see that their native language often reflects cultural needs and interests at the same time that it shares many basic patterns with other languages.

Preparation for class:

The most important thing to remember about learning a language is that it is a cumulative process, one set of forms and concepts building upon another. It is quite normal for someone new to a language to make lots of mistakes and not to master new material in a single day. Be patient with yourself. The important thing is to USE THE LANGUAGE as much as possible. At the same time, since you will be learning nearly all of Latin morphology in two terms, it is important not to fall behind. Therefore, every day spend time reviewing vocabulary and grammar. Second, spend time reading connected prose, re-reading it, and listening to the audio files. Third, practice by asking a partner questions in Latin, by composing sentences that use new vocabulary, new sentence patterns, new grammar, and by doing the homework. If you are an active learner, using all your senses and motor skills, you will learn Latin much more easily, and best of all you will retain it!

Steady, daily progress is the best way to assure retention and mastery of the Latin tongue, and consequently good grades. Cramming for quizzes and tests, though it may seem to work in the short term, will inevitably hurt you later on.

Evaluation:

Class Participation	10%
Quizzes	30%
Homework	20%
Tests (including final)	40%

Requirements:

I. Participation (10%) and attendance policy

Learning another language is a lot easier in a group, but only if everyone in the group is working together. This kind of course requires daily attention. You cannot study only before tests and quizzes. You must attend class faithfully and be prepared every day. Attendance at all meetings of the class is required. Active participation by all students in the class is very important. You are expected to ask questions, volunteer answers, and actively participate in class.

Each student is permitted 3 unexcused absences during the semester. A student with more than THREE unexcused absences will drop one grade point on the final semester grade for each unexcused absence over three.

II. Quizzes:

There will be at least one quiz per week. The lowest quiz grade will be dropped at the end of the semester. Therefore, there are no make-ups on quizzes unless a compelling reason is given for missing them.

III. Homework:

There will be daily homework assignments (meditationes), and these assignment will ALWAYS be collected and a grade recorded. Grading of these assignments is simple. You will receive 75 points for submitting the assignment and up to another 20 points for honest effort. There is no reason, then, why anyone cannot earn an average of 95 on homework assignments. You will automatically be excused from three homework assignments but will receive no points for any additional unsubmitted assignments. No late homework will be accepted for grade.

IV. Tests (40%)

There will be at least 4 full-period exams (probationes) during the semester, including a final exam. The dates for all exams will be announced at least one week in advance. Students will be encouraged to correct their exams for half credit on points lost. There are no make-ups on tests unless you present a written excuse from your doctor.

The date of this final exam meeting is: Mon., May 14, 1PM

Final Note: Do not get behind at any time. Ask for help before you feel you are slipping. Carpe diem!

Tutoring:

Latin tutors will be available several hours a week to help students individually with class assignments. Tutors are paid by the college, & their services ARE FREE TO YOU!!! Visit Academic Support Services at the 2nd floor of Poling Hall from 8am-4:30pm or on line at <http://www.monmouthcollege.edu/academics/support/tlc>
