JO ANN SWEENEY
NATIONAL SECRETARY HAS MANY PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

National Secretary Jo Ann Sweeney was born August 18, 1932, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. She attended the public elementary and grammar schools, and graduated with honors from the Wauwauosa High School in 1950. She is now a senior at Wisconsin State College, Milwaukee, majoring in languages and education. She considers herself fortunate in being able to study under a general language program recently set up at Wisconsin State under which she has been able to do work in Latin, Spanish, English, German, and French. During the past summer she took courses in Library Science at the University of Wisconsin. She found her eight-weeks stay on a large university campus very exciting and valuable.

Jo Ann has many plans for the future. Perhaps the most foreseeable one, she says, is that of teaching Latin and English in a Wisconsin secondary school. But she is also considering the possibility of teaching in Chili after graduation. Another possibility, if opportunity affords, is graduate work in comparative languages. Then, too, like most girls, she plans on marriage and a home.

Jo Ann's hobbies are tearing out art reproductions from old magazines and newspapers, swimming, dancing, and chess. Her chief interest besides languages is journalism. She has done editorial work on the college literary magazine, Cheshire, for several semesters, and during one summer she was employed as a proofreader for a large publishing house in Milwaukee. She regards her election to the office of national secretary of Eta Sigma Phi as the greatest honor which has come to her.

BETA SIGMA CHAPTER, MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY, HOST TO SECOND WISCONSIN STATE CONVENTION

The second annual state convention of the Wisconsin chapters was held in Marquette University's beautiful new Union Building on Saturday, November 21, 1953. Chapters represented, in addition to the Beta Sigma Chapter at Marquette, were Beta Omicron, Mount Mary College, Gamma Epsilon, University of Wisconsin, and Gamma Gamma, Wisconsin State College, as reported by the secretary, Patricia Houlihan, of Marquette. General chairman of the convention was Lawrence Kelly, who, in the words of Dr. Ortha Wilner of Wisconsin State, did an excellent job of advance planning and of carrying out the plans during the day.

Two conferences were held in the morning—the first, a panel presentation by Mount Mary, dealt with the possibility of the national convention being held in Wisconsin in 1955 or 1956. The group voted to extend an invitation at the next meeting in St. Louis to hold the next national convention at the University of Wisconsin, with all the other chapters cooperating fully, if the invitation should be accepted. The second presentation, by the University of Wisconsin, considered the publication of a bi-annual newspaper by the Wisconsin chapters. Wisconsin volunteered to edit the first paper as an experiment, and it was decided that the paper, if considered worthwhile, would be edited in the future by a system of rotation from chapter to chapter. The purpose of the paper would be to publicize the activities of each chapter and any state contests.

Beta Sigma Chapter presented a report on expansion of Eta Sigma Phi in the state. Letters had been sent to five other colleges in the state, but no favorable replies were received. Other possibilities were suggested and discussed.

Lunch was served in the cafeteria of Marquette's new Brooks Memorial Union, after which a tour of the university campus was conducted.

Registrar
Eta Sigma Phi Medal

THE NEW MEDAL

The membership of Eta Sigma Phi will be interested to know that Professor Stow has been in communication with the Medallic Art Company of New York, in an effort to work out some solution for the awarding of a medal to second year high school students of Latin. Professor Stow, who assisted in the establishment of the present medal and has gained valuable experience in the handling of the Eta Sigma Phi medal, points out that much time and effort will be involved in the designing of a new medal. The design itself must of course be worked out and agreed upon by the fraternity. Professor Stow would like to see the whole matter fully discussed at the National Convention, with perhaps some tentative designs for examination and comment. Certainly, we should be glad to have suggestions from members of the Grand Executive Committee, of the Board of Trustees, or from anyone else. Meanwhile, we ask the membership to exercise patience.

A REMINDER

Chapter treasurers are requested to send in as promptly as possible after initiation a carefully typed list of their new members, together with the five dollar initiation fee. It is also important that the date of initiation be given. Favorable comments on the new membership certificates have been received.

Peace is best secured by those who use their strength justly, but whose attitude shows that they have no intention of submitting to wrong.
--Thucydides, I, 71 (Jowett's translation)

THE NUNTIUS

The first afternoon conference, by Wisconsin State College, discussed the formation of an inter-chapter council. It was suggested that there be a loose organization of members within each chapter, whose function would be to act as a permanent corresponding and planning group for events of statewide significance. Each group would be responsible to its own chapter and would serve as a means of stimulating interest within its chapter on such events, allowing the other members to concentrate on matters of local importance. At present the duties of these groups would be to attend to the planning of the next state convention, preparation for the national convention, and securing possible new chapters. It was decided that the composition of each group in the individual chapters be left to the discretion of the local chapters. It was suggested that one younger and one older member be included to assure the permanency and purpose for which the group had been formed.

The subject of the last panel was "The Decline of Latin and Suggestions for Its Reawakening," presented by Sister Dorothea, Miss Wilham, Dr. Wilner, and Michael Dunn. The following are the chief points which were in general held by the panelists:

1. Crowded curricula and emphasis on dollar and cent courses can perhaps be counteracted by translation courses and by emphasizing the practicality of the classics in other language courses, especially English.

2. Teachers should be trained in more than the grammar and vocabulary so that they may impart to their classes the cultural background of these studies.

3. Good relations between high schools and colleges are not enough. Scholarships would help.

4. The ground work must be laid in high schools. This fact may soon be provable to high school teachers as the result of studies that show the correlation between English placement tests and the amount of foreign languages of college freshmen. Such a study at Wisconsin State is under way, but the results are not yet available.

At 6:30 the delegates were served dinner as guests of Mount Mary College. After dinner a program including harp selections, vocal numbers, and a dance interpretation of Pandora was presented by Mount Mary students. A tour of the Mount Mary campus and an address by Rev. George E. Ganss, S.J., on the methods of teaching Latin in Medieval times closed the day's events.

Don't forget that the deadline for submitting entries in the various Eta Sigma Phi Contests is fast approaching. Be sure to send written notice of a desire to participate not later than February 1, addressed to the Chairman of Contests, Professor William C. Korfmacher, Saint Louis University, 3650 Lindell Boulevard, Saint Louis 6, Missouri. Entries themselves must be postmarked not later than February 15. For full details on the Contests, see the November 15 issue of The Nuntius.
JOHN B. AUSTIN

NATIONAL TREASURER'S INTERESTS LIE IN FIELDS OF HISTORY AND CLASSICAL LANGUAGES

John B. Austin, National Treasurer of Eta Sigma Phi, is now a senior at Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana. He is majoring in History, with Classical Languages as a minor.

John was born on September 19, 1932, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Harold Austin. After graduation from the Lower Merion Senior High School, he entered the University of Pennsylvania for two years, before transferring to Tulane.

Among his other activities, he is a member of Phi Alpha Theta, national honorary history fraternity, president of the Tulane Radio Club, and Senior Warden of the Tulane-Newcomb Canterbury Club. Outside of college his interest ranges from model railroading to photography and ornithology.

After graduation John plans to continue his study in graduate school, specializing in Medieval Church History.

ANCIENT ROME IN MODERN HISTORY

by

Sibyl Stonecipher
Western Kentucky State Teachers College

A condensation of a paper read at the Forty-ninth Annual Meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South, Cincinnati, Ohio, April 2, 1953.

From Aeneas to Justinian runs the tale of ancient Rome in modern story, from Troy to Gaul, to Italy, to Noricum, and back again to Britain and New Rome. Twelve recent novels and novellas form the material for this paper, which tries to set forth some present-day writers' use of the eternally fascinating theme of Rome and her history.

There are three types of stories--the first concerned with legend and Caesar, the second with Rome as the background for Christianity, the third with the history of the Empire in the days of its decline. Almost all of them follow the pattern of the modern historical novel which takes both characters and situations from history and endeavors to keep up interest by a psychological treatment.

In the first group let us consider the revised version of the fall of Troy told by George Baker in Paris of Troy (Penguin Books, 1951). After the war Aeneas stayed in Ilion to help rebuild the city over which his father was to rule. Within ten years it was hard to recall the earlier city. The young Julus grew to manhood, and Aeneas then decided that it would be good for him to see something of the world before settling down. Their journey was full of adventures, Anchises died, Aeneas won a charming wife, but whether he stayed in Italy or not, that we shall never know.

An Irishman tangles with Caesar's army to the advantage of both in a Saturday Evening Post novelette, The Magic Afternoon, by Clements Ripley (December 27, 1952.)

A story in which Caesar and his Romans are the villains is Esther Fisher Brown's Gaul is Divided (William-Frederick Press, N.Y., 1952). The book-jacket blurb calls this "an exciting and turbulent novel of the neurotic lust for conquest in the face of the tragically heroic striving of the Gauls for national unity and self-determination." It is also a detailed description of Druid College life at Carnac. Vercingetorix is the hero--high-principled, devoted unsparingly to his father's dream of unifying Gaul. Unfortunately, the Hae-duans are incurable opportunists and see the threat of a Roman invasion as a source of possible wealth to the country and to the leaders personally.

Christianity in the Roman world is the theme of a steady stream of historical novels. Of these I shall mention only four. The Bold Galilean by William LeGette Blythe (University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1948) presents three young Romans against the background of the last days of Christ's ministry. Rome is merely the distant and despised seat of rotten society, hateful power, and oppressive taxes.

Barabbas by Lagerkvist (Random House, 1951), the Swedish Nobel prize-winner, brings the rescued thief into the hands of the Roman governor of Paphos, who takes him as a slave to Rome, to his huge palace in the heart of the city. In Rome Barabbas finally meets the death from which he had once been saved by the cries of the high priest's mob.

A novel as popular as Costain's The Silver Chalice (Doubleday, 1952) needs only the briefest reference. The young hero Basil is summoned to Nero's court where a friendly Roman briefs him on the political situation, the opposing parties of Tigellinus and Petronius, both of which Basil should try to avoid. The palace is described as a filthy old barracks.

Almost two centuries elapse between the rule of Nero and the events in Gladys Schmitt's Confessors of the Name (The Dial Press, 1952).
Since the 1953 National Convention last April the National Office has been receiving rather frequently requests from various individuals for information on Eta Sigma Phi. The number of such inquiries seems somewhat larger than usual. This is, of course, most encouraging and indicates that there will likely be several applications for charters to be acted upon at the next National Convention in Saint Louis.

Eta Sigma Phi has had a remarkable growth in recent years in spite of an all too common belief that the Classics are gradually disappearing from the colleges. Within the last four or five years no less than twenty-three new chapters have been added to the active rolls, an average of about five per year. Is it too optimistic to predict that the society will have a hundred active chapters within the next ten years?

One of the most effective ways to stimulate the extension of the Fraternity would seem to be through the efforts of individual chapters. The efforts of the Wisconsin chapters to interest sister institutions in organizing chapters, although without immediate results, is highly commendable, and might well be imitated by other chapters.

ARE YOU GETTING THE NUNTIUS PROMPTLY?

Copies of The Nuntius are regularly mailed from the New Orleans Post Office on or before the middle of the month of publication. There is some indication, however, that there has been considerable delay in some cases at least, in the delivery to the various chapters. The editor would appreciate it very much if chapter representatives would inform him when there has been an undue lapse of time between date of publication and delivery in the mails.
The Nuntius

Byzantium as a guardian of our heritage of Greek and Roman culture against the aggressors of the East. He produces a fascinating picture of the two rulers and their city, and helps to fill in a misty mid-region of history with live people and stirring adventure.

The third novel of the period of Honorius' reign begins in Britain in 405. The Little Emperors by Alfred Duggan (Coward-McCann, Inc., 1953) is a first-rate historical novel, the one really superior novel in the whole list. Calus Sempronius Felix is the middle-aged, capable, and honest chief civilian official in the first and wealthiest province of Britain. He feels himself part and parcel of the majesty and dominion of Rome, and although he has been baptized as a Christian, he really believes in nothing but Rome, and civilization, and the Stoic duty to aid mankind.

The last novel, Die Letzten Tage von Juuvavum, by A. Gartner-Tallerstorff (J. Hülle ger, Salzburg, 1949) is a little story which I picked up in Salzburg in 1950. It is a romantic account based on history, folk-tale, saga, and legend of the fall of Colonia Aelia Hadriana Juuvavia (Salzburg) about the year 477.

The cities fall, the heroes die, but the ancient glory can still ensnare the imagination and even now we can write with Claudian (Cons. Stil. iii, 59-60), "Nor shall there ever be an end to Rome's sway."

Among the Chapters

Alpha Chi, Tulane University

Alpha Chi Chapter, under the capable direction of its president, Sterling Peebles, and her fellow-officers has had three very successful meetings. At the October meeting Professor Geer, Chairman of the Department of Classical Languages, spoke on the subject, "A Classicist Looks at the Federalist Papers". In November, Dr. Donald Dudley, Visiting Professor of History from the University of Birmingham, England, gave a lecture entitled "Roman Britain". On December 10 the chapter joined with the Oreades, the Classics Club of Newcomb College, in celebrating the Saturnalia. The program consisted of skits, a nativity scene, exchange of gifts, followed by refreshments. Election of new members and initiation exercises, followed by a banquet, will take place in February.

Chapter officers for the year, besides the president, are: Vice-president, Alan Dean Calcote; Recording Secretary, Beth Slawson; Corresponding Secretary, Jacqueline Segall; Treasurer, Carl Conrad; Sergeant-at-arms, James Smith.

Beta Delta, University of Tennessee

Audrey Loy, Secretary of Beta Delta Chapter, announces that the first meeting of the year was held on October 13 to elect officers for the year, as follows: President, Mary Jo Shultz; Vice-President, Larry Shelton; Secretary, Audrey Loy; Treasurer, Sandra Cotrell.

Beta Zeta, Saint Louis University

Professor William C. Korfmacher, honorary executive secretary of Eta Sigma Phi, announced the following Inductive Lectures, offered by the Classics Department of Saint Louis University for graduate students majoring in the classical languages, and open to any other persons of the University or of the general public:

November 7: "Etiam in Minimis -- a phase of Graduate Study," by Professor Korfmacher;
November 14: "Research in the University Vatican Microfilm Collection", by Professor Chancey E. Finch;

Beta Kappa, College of Notre Dame of Maryland

Geraldine K. Quinn, President of Beta Kappa Chapter, reports as follows: "We have had two meetings so far this year. In October we had a lecture, with illustrations, on the history of Constantinople. We wanted to commemorate the 50th anniversary of its fall to the Turks in 1453. Our November meeting included a talk, also illustrated, on the Early Culture of America, stressing particularly the archaeological sites in Mexico. In December we shall view the Catholic University production of Antigone. We try to include a Greek play in our annual program as often as possible, for we realize that attendance at one play is worth many talks about it. We have in mind for our later programs a talk and illustrations of some native Greek customs by an Athenian-born student; and of a trip through the Holy Land made by a member of the faculty."

Beta Lambda, Marymount College

Sister Marie Antoinette, Faculty Adviser of Beta Lambda, was scheduled to show pictures of the Greek temples which she took during her tour in Italy last summer, at a meeting of the chapter on December 2. She visited the Greek temples in Paestum in southern Italy, which she describes as really magnificent vestiges of Greek culture from pagan antiquity. In addition to a six weeks tour of Italy, Sister Marie Antoinette had an extended tour of Spain, England, and Ireland, returning in time for the September term.
BETA TAU, GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

Beta Tau Chapter's Faculty Adviser, Robert F. Young, S.J., reports that his group was looking forward to an interesting year of activities. "Our time," he says, "will be devoted in large part to reading Greek plays in translation and to discussions of them. Our public lecture series will be carried on as usual."

BETA PSI, SOUTHWESTERN AT MEMPHIS

Beta Psi's first semester project was a huge success, writes Douglas Marsh, chapter president. The chapter helped sponsor the production of Sophocles' Electra which was presented on November 23 and 24 in Hardie Auditorium. The actual production was handled by Alpha Psi Omega, dramatics fraternity. Members of Eta Sigma Phi sold tickets, made posters, gave out programs, and mailed announcements to the Speech and Latin departments of the high schools. A special feature of the production was the use of a silent chorus of modern dancers onstage to represent the Mycenaean women, while two voices offstage spoke the lines. The performances were reported as being really exceptional. Mr. Raymond S. Hill, professor of Dramatics and Speech at Southwestern, remarked that, both financially and artistically, Electra was one of the most successful productions of recent years on the campus.

At their regular monthly meetings records have been used. In October the members heard the well-known Judith Anderson recording of excerpts from Euripides' Medea, and in November a recording entitled "When Greek Meets Greek", one of the Ways of Mankind series distributed by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. This record deals with the difference in philosophy and outlook between Athens and Sparta.

GAMMA GAMMA, WISCONSIN STATE COLLEGE

Jo Ann Sweeney announces that the three chapters in Milwaukee, Beta Omicron, Mount Mary College, Beta Sigma, Marquette University, and Gamma Gamma plan to cooperate in the distribution of high school medals this year.

CAN YOU TRANSLATE THIS?

Cane decane, canis, sed ne cane, cane decane
De cane; de cano, cane decane, cane.

A one dollar bill will be sent to each of the first five active members of Eta Sigma Phi who translates these verses accurately and sends the translation to the editor. Only one entry will be honored from a chapter. The translation and names of the contest winners (if there are any!) will be published in the next issue of The Nuntius.

NEW MEMBERS OF ETA SIGMA PHI

The following is a list of initiates reported to the Executive Secretary since March 15, 1953, at which time a similar list was published in The Nuntius:
