CONVENTION 1976
The Classics in the American Experience

Vanderbilt University's Psi Chapter and Nashville, Tennessee, will serve as hosts for Eta Sigma Phi's 45th National Convention March 18-20. The program is being prepared with generous support from the American Philological Association's Committee on Classical Humanities in the American Republic, and will focus on "the Classics in the American Experience." Most meetings will take place in Vanderbilt's new Saratt Student Center, and delegates will be housed in the nearby Holiday Inn Vanderbilt, which has the added attraction of being located across the street from the world's only full-scale replica of the Parthenon of Athens.

The first convention activity will occur on Thursday evening, March 18, at 8:00 p.m., when Professor Herbert W. Benario of Emory University will speak on "Classical Influences on Eighteenth Century American Political Thought." This lecture is being sponsored by Eta Sigma Phi and the University Lecture Committee, and a social hour for members of Eta Sigma Phi will follow. The next morning the first General Session will occur, to be followed by an address by Professor Meyer Reinhold of the University of Missouri, whose topic will be "The Classics and a Virtuous Nation in Early America."

After a break for lunch, a panel presentation will be followed by a trip to the Parthenon, where Vanderbilt's Professor Ned Nabers will give a tour. The evening's activities will begin with a reception to be hosted by the College of Arts and Science, to be followed by a banquet, at which two of the founders of the fraternity will be present.

The main speaker will be Professor H. Lloyd Stow, Professor of Classics and former chairman of the Department of Classical Studies at Vanderbilt. Also present to address the convention will be the fraternity's honorary president, Gertrude Smith Greenwood, former Professor of Greek at the University of Chicago.

On Saturday morning, March 20th, the Convention will officially end with the second General Session. Psi Chapter hopes that many delegates who wish will remain to attend the 6:30 show that evening of the Grand Ole Opry at Opryland. Information about purchasing tickets (at $3.00 each) will be sent to each chapter soon along with packets about reservations for the motel and the banquet. It is necessary to emphasize, because of the difficulty of obtaining tickets for the Opry and of motel requirements, that delegates should plan to have their reservations in to Psi Chapter at least two weeks before the convention.

Vanderbilt is a private university founded in 1873 and named for...
Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, who contributed a million dollars to build and endow the University with the wish that it should "contribute to strengthening the ties which should exist between all sections of our common country."

The University, which has always been especially strong in the liberal arts traditions, now comprises eight schools and approximately 7,000 students, about half of these being in the College of Arts and Science; and the libraries contain more than 1,300,000 volumes. The Department of Classical Studies offers three undergraduate majors, as well as master's degrees in Greek and Latin, the M.A.T., and the Ph.D. in Classical Studies.

ADDENDUM

The editor regrets the omission from the fall issue of the Nuntius of the following initiates:

GAMMA RHO: Kim Baker, Keith Derrick, Peter Ferraby, Scott Field, Gregory Wortley.

HONORARY MEMBERS: Donald E. Martin, Sherrilyn Martin, Sue Patrick.

Fraternity Jewelry

The L. G. Balfour Co. has recently issued new gold surcharges for the fraternity's jewelry. Since the last price list did not indicate a base list, the exact prices at press time are not available. The editor will try to have an accurate price for distribution at the convention. Please note all orders for jewelry are to be sent to Mr. W. L. Gosnell, 10197 Jefferson Highway, Baton Rouge, Louisiana 70809.
ATHENS

by Billie Anderson

I spent six weeks of this summer at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens. The trip proved to be a thorough, if often exhausting, way to tour the major part of Greece.

Our leader was Dr. Colin Edmonson of the University of Washington. He was, in his words, "greedy for your sakes" and always urged us on to see one more site. He was also responsible for broadening the scope of the program from a basically archeological approach to include all ages of Greek thought, art, and literature. It was a rare stop at which some Pausanias wasn't read, or a poem by George Seferis or some other Greek author. Dr. Edmonson also made himself available for extra trips to such places as the workrooms in the Agora or the Epigraphical Museum on our occasional free afternoons.

The first few days of the session were spent in Athens, getting acquainted with the city, the buildings and resources of the school, and with the other members of the group; and preparing the two reports each student was to present to the group. We received our first example of the required physical stamina of the tour by climbing to the top of Lykabettus hill behind the school buildings in the hot afternoon sun. Two days later we had our first taste of sailing the Greek waters on a day trip to Aegina. After these short trials we set out on an eleven day bus tour of the Peloponnesos, visiting everything from prehistoric sues such as the one at Lerna to the beautiful fortsations at Nauplion.

Having wearied ourselves of hotel living and no mail, we gladly returned to Athens for a few days to recuperate and to explore the Acropolis and the Agora in minute detail before flying to Crete for a three day trip. After the white marble ruins of Athens, the richly colored frescoes of Knossos and the exotic Kamares ware in Herakleion Museum were exciting changes. We also had an unexpected opportunity to visit an excavation at Archanes on the same day a tholos tomb was opened. Back in Athens again, the next few days were punctuated by a day trip to Salamis and Eleusis, where the ancient sites were unfortunately marred by pollution from the oil refineries and cement factories, respectively.

After this we sailed to Mykonos, using that more inhabitable island for a base from which to sail to Delos and back on the next two days. After returning to the Piraeus we spent a free day in Delos.

ROME

by Christine E. Thompson

The 1975 Summer Session of the American Academy in Rome was under the direction of Darby Scott of Bryn Mawr College. In our course we traced the development of Rome from the earliest settlement on the Palatine to the age of Constantine through the study of the material remains in and around the city. We made excursions outside of the city at least once a week to such places as Alba Fucens (pictured), Cosa, Tarquinia, Cerveteri, Praeneste, Tivoli, and Ostia. Since it would be impossible to tell you here about everything we did, I would like to talk about only a few events of the summer.

I first saw the Roman Forum when I had just arrived in the city after two tiring days of travelling. In spite of my weariness, the excitement of finally being in Rome struck me. Even though there are only ruins left of most of the monuments built 2000 years ago, their former grandeur and impressiveness can easily be imagined. During the summer I had several more opportunities to visit the forum both with the class and on my own. The class made at least three visits there as we studied first the Iron Age settlement and then the construction of later monuments, basilicas, and temples of the Republican and Imperial ages.

One of our most interesting excursions was made to Ostia, the ancient port city of Rome. There the extensive remains of the city as it was in the second century A.D. provide a good picture of the organization and city planning of a major port.

Athens before starting on the northern tour. We spent six days visiting all the wonders at Delphi, the battle ground at Thermopylae, and a number of sites around Thebes. After returning to Athens we made a day trip to the temple at Sounion, once again encountering traces of Byron on the columns just as at Delphi; and then several more visits around Athens and the session was completed.
BETA ALPHA
(University of South Dakota):
Members of Beta Alpha Chapter of Eta Sigma Phi and Professor and Mrs. Brent Froberg began the 1974-1975 school year’s activities by hosting an open house for all students of Latin and Greek at the home of Professor and Mrs. Froberg, where evening events for the coming school year were discussed and students had an opportunity to get acquainted with their professors and with each other.

For the past four years Beta Alpha has sponsored an annual Classical Lecture Series for students, faculty, and community. This fall’s sponsored speaker was Dr. Herbert Benario, Professor of Classics at Emory University. Dr. Benario gave his address, entitled “Peace, Relevance, and Empire,” before approximately 200 people. A reception for Dr. Benario was held after this most enlightening and informative lecture.

Other activities so far this year have included our annual initiation banquet, held February 23, in which seven new members were accepted into Eta Sigma Phi. Also initiated, as an honorary member of Eta Sigma Phi, was Dr. Richard Brown, instructor of ancient history in the University of South Dakota’s history department.

Activities also sponsored by Beta Alpha have been a night of free movies, popcorn, and pop, open to all interested students, and the Second Annual Classical Arête Contest, in which students of Greek and Latin compete for prizes by displaying their command of a broad range of classical knowledge. Events which we as yet look forward to are the Spring Classical Lecture, to be given this year by Dr. Mark P.O. Morford, co-author of the “I Ook Classical Mythology,” and a year-end open house where prizes for the winners of the Arête Contest and various departmental scholarships will be granted.

BETA BETA (Furman University):
Last Spring three of our members attended the National Convention of Eta Sigma Phi, which was held at Georgetown College in Georgetown, Kentucky. Then when national officers were elected, Phil Stewart of our chapter was selected to be Megas Grammateus. Also our chapter has been quite busy with the publication of the Nuntius, under the leadership of Dr. Roy Lindahl, Editor.

Last Spring our chapter also offered Latin awards to outstanding Latin students in the Greenville High Schools. This Fall seven new members were initiated: David Rothfuss, Don Lewis, Doug Roberts, John Norwood, Ciri Burfield, Steve Freeman. Then a complete list of all past alumni of the Beta Beta Chapter was compiled in hopes that a chapter newsletter would be sent to alumni beginning next year. This past March we held a display case in the Library with pictures and texts around the theme of the Greco-Roman world.

Finally this May we plan to initiate several new members, including Latin High School talent teams from the Greenville County area. This initiation will be followed by a Greek meal at Greenville’s Greek Restaurant.

Linda Kay Myers, Grammateus

BETA KAPPA
(College of Notre Dame of Maryland):
Beta Kappa Chapter has held three major activities during this year: a card party sponsored by the associate members to raise money to help send a delegate to the National Convention in Tallahassee and two programs to promote interest in classics among high school students.

On six Friday afternoons during March, April, and May we are holding a lecture series for honor students in the Baltimore area high schools. Topics include Greek myth, Greek tragedy, Roman comedy, Roman love poetry, the ancient city, and women in antiquity. Each lecture is followed by a session dealing with the influence of Greek and Latin on English, including English words derived from Greek and Latin, Latin words and phrases used in English, and expressions in English that derive from classical mythology.

On May 3 we will have our annual Latin Day for high school students. Fifty Latin teachers have been invited to send students. In addition to a continuous showing of films and filmstrip/slide presentations on topics related to the study of Latin, there are four separate contests in which each school may participate: The Latin Bowl will be held in three divisions, for Latin I, Latin II, and advanced Latin. Each school may enter a four-member team in each division. There will also be a content in which each school may produce a short scene from an English translation of a comedy by Plautus or Terence. Four trophies will be awarded to the winning schools. We will also award twelve Eta Sigma Phi medals as part of Latin Day, one to each member of the three winning teams in the Latin Bowl.

We have invited two students to become members of Beta Kappa chapter and the initiation ceremony will be held in May.

BETA ZETA (St. Louis University):
It was a very good year. We increased from only one member in March of 1974 to our current number of thirty members. Four of these are graduate students with associate membership who nonetheless have taken active roles in our various programs. A brief listing of our events the past year include:

1) Spring Initiation and election of officers with the Initiation Dinner held in the Fall to start off the new year.

2) Business meetings in the Fall centered around initial planning of the High School Classics Day and one meeting included a slide presentation of Cahokia Mounds—an Indian burial grounds under excavation.

3) Our December meeting was a social event in the form of a Christmas party for current members and candidates interested in future membership.

4) We hosted the High School Day on the Ides of March which took a great deal of effort in planning because it had been a few years since our last High School Day. Our efforts were rewarded when sixty students representing twelve area high schools participated and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

5) Closing banquet, election, and installation of new officers was held in April. Dr. Carolyn Valone of our Art History Department, who worked closely with our Department and at our High School Day, was made an honorary member of our chapter. Following the tradition of a true Roman banquet, the smorgasbord was a promising beginning for next year.

6) Finally, a delegation of five was sent to the National Convention in Tallahassee, Florida.

BETA UPSILON (Marshall University):
To begin the academic year, Beta Upsilon Chapter of Eta Sigma Phi held its annual fall picnic early in the semester. All members, as well as members of the Classical Association, convened for a short business meeting and picnic afterwards.

Our 1974 Saturnalia was held during the last week of first semester classes. We sang Christmas songs in Latin and enjoyed the traditional cheese cake, ginger men, and peanut game. We participated in the traditional Saturnalia ritual as it had been formulated by a past member of our chapter.

Initiation of new members was held 14 March; we received 6 members into our chapter.

Since enrollment in our department doubled last year due to our use of campus publicity, on 21 March we again convened for a workshop to make posters for distribution on campus before advance registration for fall term.

The primary activity of Beta Upsilon this year has been the implementation of a self-taught course in Italian. Since Dr. Hoy is going to Italy this summer, and since numerous students were also interested in learning Italian, we met once weekly to share in a programmed self-study unit in Italian. Besides being of benefit to our members, this study was a service to other interested students of the university. The activity was totally extra-curricular; attendance was gratifying.

Plans for the rest of this semester include granting Latin awards to advanced high-school students of the area as well as a workshop to be held 26 April for 7 area high schools. As usual, Beta Upsilon takes pleasure in contributing to the Scholarship Fund.

Respectfully submitted,
Deborah Callison
President, Beta Upsilon Chapter

GAMMA ALPHA
(Indiana State University):
For the past few years, Gamma Alpha chapter has been relatively inactive; our main functions were the spring initiation and the awarding of medals and certificates to high school seniors.

Last fall we decided to become more active and advertise the presence of the Classics at Indiana State University. To accomplish this, our first action was to build a chariot, add a triumphant general and a captive, and enter it in the ISU Homecoming Parade. The parade was telecast by WTHI-TV, a local station. The parade theme was “Yesterday Once More” and our float was entitled “Veni, Vidi, Vici”.

In December Gamma Alpha held a bake sale to raise money for medals to be awarded to high school seniors this spring.

In January Dr. Whitney Engeran, chairman of ISU’s Department of Art, spoke to Gamma Alpha and displayed some paintings he and a friend had done on mythical themes. His topic was “Alive and Well: Reflections on Latin and Life.”

The pledges will take part in a slave sale in April as their pledge project. Late in April our annual initiation will be held.

In April and May Gamma Alpha will again award certificates and medals to high school seniors throughout the state who have done outstanding work in Latin.

We are hoping for a larger enrollment in Classical courses in the future, due to the fact that a Classics minor was recently approved at ISU.

GAMMA IOTA (Wabash College):
The usual round of activities of the Gamma Iota Chapter were in evidence during the year 1974-75.

Assist in testing of students for participation in the Honors Abroad Summer Program for Indiana High School Students of Latin;

Plan and participate in Classics Colloquia at the College;

Award Eta Sigma Phi medals to outstanding Latin students of Montgomery County;

Participate in the Eta Sigma Phi Contests.

As a new venture, Wabash College has arranged a Mini-Conference on May 1st for high school students of Latin. Expected attendance is 200. The Gamma Iota Chapter has volunteered its services in providing a complimentary barbecue luncheon for the visitors on that occasion. At a recent track event members of the chapter netted $60 from sale of refreshments, the proceeds to go toward food for the Mini-Conference Barbecue.

Respectfully submitted,
John J. Jonikas
President

GAMMA KAPPA (Heidelberg College):
Although the Gamma Kappa chapter started out slow, it began picking up speed around December and ended in an avalanche of activities this spring. After a few routine planning meetings in the fall, we went on to the annual Christmas party. Next on the schedule was a slide show on Catullus, and then, the initiation dinner, a trip to the Toledo Museum of Art, a trip to Ann Arbor to see Aristophanes’ The Birds and to end the year an alumni dinner followed by a guest lecturer. The membership was small for we graduated a number of active seniors last year but we inducted many enthusiastic, healthy initiates this year, making next year’s program promising.

GAMMAOMICRON (Monmouth College):
1974-1975 has been, we hope, a crucial year for Gamma Omicron chapter. Like the national economy, our strength has been steadily decreasing for several years — ever since the removal of the foreign language requirement, for graduation. Such courses as Classical mythology remain very popular, but fewer and fewer students enroll in Latin and Greek. Therefore, our chapter this year has been quite small, but it has not lost one bit of its vitality and enthusiasm. Our greatest encouragement comes from the fact that our new college president is the first one, so far as even our sponsor can remember, who is dedicated to preserving our department in the curriculum.

Our most ambitious undertaking this year was a Classics Day for high school students and teachers, just last week. Over two hundred and fifty came to spend the day being exposed to such activities as word derivation, a taste of Greek, twentieth century literature in Latin, and a slide lecture on Classical mythology.

We have also continued our traditional projects — sending two newsletters to our alums and contributing to the Eta Sigma Phi scholarship fund. This is the first year that we have been unable to send a delegate to the national convention since our installation in 1956.

Respectfully submitted,
Alan Farris, president

GAMMA SIGMA
(The University of Texas):
Gamma Sigma Chapter sincerely regrets not being able to attend this year's national convention, but we would like to submit our annual report.

Last Fall we sponsored a reading of the Apocolocyntosis, translated by Dr. Douglass Parker; several members of the faculty played the leading roles, while we read the rest. The reading not only entertained the faculty and students, but it also served as a membership drive.

We have been more active this Spring with various events. In March the Classics Department was visited by the Latin students of McArthur High School in San Antonio. The students sat in on several classes, and, at the end of the day, the department held a reception for them.

On March 13, we sponsored an "Ides of March" party; it was held at our Student Union Tavern. We held it on a night rather than the actual March 15 so that more students could come. We hope Caesar will forgive us; at least there was a good turn out.

The most important event of this year was our presentation of the Curcilio on April 11. One of our members, Susan Jo Smith, translated Plautus’ play and organized its production. The Chapter then traveled to Richardson, Texas, to perform for the Texas State Junior Classical League convention. That same night and the next day, Dr. Parker, Susan Smith, and Bob Hicks helped judge some of the contests.

We ended the year with our annual banquet at one of Austin’s Italian restaurants. At that time we initiated our new members and installed new officers.

Again the Gamma Sigma Chapter regrets that we can not attend the convention, but we wish the best of luck to the convention.

Respectfully,
Mary Alice McLean
Grammat'ea
GAMMA PHI (Le Moyne College):
1) We have initiated three new members (including myself) as of Spring, 1974.
2) We are planning a new initiation this coming Spring.
3) Held Chapter election in October, 1974.
4) Attempted to collaborate a joint economical trip to this Convention with Delta Zeta Chapter (Colgate University), but plans did not materialize.

Also, I would like to mention our good record both in always attempting to enter annual contests, and in winning a number of them. Because of an oversight of our faculty advisor, we were unable to enter these contests this year. However, we are planning to participate next year.

EPSILON EPSILON (Rockford College):

On September 29, 1974, the Epsilon Epsilon Chapter of Eta Sigma Phi of Rockford College held its first initiation of the year for honorary members. The initiation followed an excellent ham dinner prepared by a few members in the kitchen of the new dormitory. Three honorary members from Rockford, Illinois, were inducted into the society. For the Christmas holidays, Rockford College sponsored a wassail during which students sang carols in different languages. Members of Eta Sigma Phi sang various carols in Latin, conveying a true Christmas spirit.

During the year, the group attended five A1A lectures on the Rockford College Campus. On March 11, 1975, six more active members were inducted into the society. The six students were chosen from various candidates pursuing studies in Greek or Latin. At present, Eta Sigma Phi has fifteen members plus six honorary members. Also, during the year, the group had the opportunity to see a few films pertaining to classical studies. In April, new officers will be elected for the 1975-76 school year.

Respectfully submitted,
Margarita Jarosekas Greenberg
Secretary

EPSILON ZETA (University of Idaho):

Epsilon Zeta chapter was formed in March of 1975. That spring, we were treated to a film on Archaeology in Mycene and Crete. At our next meeting we were entertained by a performance of rollicking scene from the Plautine comedy, Rudens, put on by two of our members. The last meeting of the season was highlighted by the prophetic pronouncements on graduating seniors by our local sibyl.

For the Fall Semester of 1975, Epsilon Zeta chapter initiated its first annual lecture series on the Classics. The opening lecture was a slide tour of Greece, conducted by our outstanding alumna, Candace Proctor, who had spent the summer at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens. In November, we sponsored a lecture-demonstration on Greek Inscriptions of the Lycuran Period given by Professor Cynthia Schwenk of the History Department. Professor Schwenk, who is completing important research on these Fourth Century inscriptions, enthusiastically explained her work on them and showed us many of her squeezes and photographs. Our last lecture for the autumn session was from our adviser, Dr. Luschnig, who spoke on the Roman Culinary Art.

After the lecture (which was attended by about sixty people from the university community and environs) we were invited to taste several dishes (including puis punica, alica, boleti, epityrum, and cicer, all subtly flavored with liquamen) which had been concocted according to ancient recipes handed down by Cato and Apicius.

This semester's last official function was a theatre party for the production of Sophocles' Antigone. After a moving performance by the university players, we were invited back into the house for a talk with the director and the actors unmasked.

COME TO THE

48th National Convention

in Nashville, Tennessee

March 18, 19, 20, 1976
Amendments Passed On Second Reading At The 47th Convention

1. Article VII, Section I, change "and shall perform all such duties as the office of Grand President of similar societies usually performs" to "and shall perform all such duties as the office of Grand President entails."

2. Article VIII, Section 3, add: "Prior to the National Convention, he shall notify those chapters ajwho have not sent delegates to the National Convention within the last five years, and b)whose lack of attendance at the National Convention will violate Article X, Section 6 of the Constitution, resulting in a revocation of their charter." Discussion clarified this addition to mean that 2 letters of notice would be sent, one in the fifth year and one in the sixth.

3. Article XIV, Section I, add subparagraph f: "In case the normal rotation of areas for the National Convention cannot be followed, the Grand Executive Council shall be empowered to make a suitable choice from proffered invitations, on the condition that successive annual meetings are not held at the same institution.

4. Article X, Section 9, add: "Any school whose charter has been either suspended or revoked may petition the Executive Committee for approval to reinstate its charter, provided the school has not lost its accreditation. Action taken by the Executive Committee shall be reported to the next National Convention."

Amendments Passed on First Reading At The 47th Convention

1. Article XI, Section 1: Strike the word "undergraduate."

2. Article II, Section 1 a: add "and high schools" at the end of the sentence.

3. Article XIII, Section 1: add a substitution "a": "A reinstatement fee of $10.00 shall be paid to the Grand Treasurer by each local chapter before reinstatement."

Amendments Proposed and Sent to Committee for Further Study

1. Article XI, Section 1, Insert after "in courses in Latin and Greek" "or classical humanities"; substitution for this whole phrase "classical languages or classical humanities." The committee was also requested to define "classical languages" and "classical humanities."

2. Article XI, Section 9: Replace the entire section with the following:"a. Alumni membership shall include all members of this society not presently a student at a college or a university. Alumni members shall not be eligible to hold the four undergraduate offices of this society. However, they may be elected to the Board of Trustees, to the office of Megas Presbyter, or such other office as the society may create and not prohibit them to hold. b. Upon payment of annual dues of $3.00, alumni members shall be entitled to receive the Nuntius and all other communications 'of this society, c. Life alumni membership shall be awarded upon a payment of $50.00 to the National Executive Secretary. Benefits of life alumni membership shall include exemption from annual alumni dues and a life subscription to the Nuntius."

3. Article VIII, Section 6: add: "Duties of the Megas Presbyter shall be to promote the interests of active graduate ancV alumni memers, to advise the Executive Committee accordingly, and to perform such other duties as the Executive Committee shall appoint and as such officers normally appoint."
